

SUMMER PEACE SUMMIT 2021

MEETING OF THE P50 COMMUNITY WILL TAKE PLACE ON JULY 1

The Third Summer Peace Summit, an annual large meeting of women of the Peace 50 community, will take place online on July 1. Women from different countries will share their ideas and experience in the implementation of projects aimed at preserving the planet. Barbara Dietrich and Marina Volynkina, the founders of the P50 community, told us more about the forthcoming event.

The Peace 50 community members believe that women have a unique force and bear a big responsibility for the preservation of peace for the current and future generations. That is why this year's summit will be dedicated to the topic Preserving the Planet – Global Call to Action.

"The Summer Peace Forum 2021 is of particular importance. The people are highly conscious of environmental challenges and do their best to protect air, water and natural habitats. But the ongoing pandemic has changed the way we live. People have worries and doubts. We are responsible for the future of all of us", said Barbara Dietrich.

Preserving the planet is a global challenge in terms of bringing up certain behaviour in people and promoting the need for active action aimed at strengthening horizontal relations, the development of policies of good neighbourliness, and spiritual kinship.

The Peace 50 community members are women leaders from different countries and fields of activity concerned about the future of the world. Each P50 member carries out active work in her own direction, implements socially significant initiatives, and represents her active position at international forums and conferences. The Summer Peace Summit is a platform giving women an opportunity to share their best practices, support one another, and implement joint social projects.

The community members took part in a large number of important events for the planet and initiated many activities this year alone.

"During the time of self-isolation and pandemic, we reconsidered the importance of such feelings as empathy, love, and patience. At the Summit, we will discuss such key values as love, empathy, patience, belonging, the purity of mental images, and positively conscious behaviour", said Marina Volynkina. As she emphasized, during the self-isolation and pandemic period, which have exacerbated and exposed many problems of humanity, we have once again reconsidered the importance of human communication.

One of the key messages of the Peace 50 community's concept lies in shaping and strengthening friendly horizontal communication among women worldwide. According to all members of the community, many of the global challenges faced by humanity today can be solved by means of constructive dialogue and soft power. That is the very tool making it possible to save the planet and direct society to the path of sustainable development.
